AS READERS OF WAR NEWS HAVE FOUND OUT.

The Reason Is That Morro Means Promontory and a Promontory Is Characteristic of Cuban Harbors.

Readers of war news must be struck by the number of "Morro castles" with which our forces have to deal, says the Cleveland Leader. Havana's fort of that name is the best known building in Cuba. When Admiral Sampson went down to Porto Rico to shake up the Spaniards there the principle fortification he had to deal with was another Morro castle. And now comes word of an attack by American warships on a third Morro castle at Santiago de Cuba, the most in at Santiago de Cuba, the most in waisina portant port in the southeastern waisina portant port in the southeastern waisina portant port in the southeastern waisina portant p happened that no such castles were encountered at Matanzas, Cardenas and Cienfuegos.

The explaination of this reoccurrence of the name "Morro castle" is founded on the fact that the word 'Morro' means "promontory." Many of the harbors of Cuba are remarkable land-locked bays, opening to the sea through narrow channels, long and deep. Th y are shaped somewhat like a man's hand, with the fingers more or less spread and the wrist reduced in size. At Havana, Santiago and some other parts, one side of the channel connecting the inner bay with the sea ends in a bold, rocky headland. The opposite point is lower and less conspicuous. Where the higher and steeper angle of the shore, between the channel of the harbor enterance on one side and the open sea on the other, is crowned by an elaborate fort. Formidable in the times in which it was erected, this fortification is usually and naturally named Morro castle, or 'the castle of the Promontory.'

fort, although the harbor is one of the typical bays of the Cuban coast with a narrow entrance. One Furniture. reason is that the city is comparawhen Spain fortified her American possessions with the massive and picturesque stone castles which familiar by Havana's picturesque old fort is appearing continually in the dispatches, and why it is necessary to discriminate between the various "Morro castles" which figure in the news of the day.

SHE WON THE GAME.

Golf is the athletic twin sister of whist, says the New York Times. Groceries and Provisions. The good golf player cannot talk the game requires too much concentration. It might seem unsociable, but any one that knows it knows that there is a unanimity of Fresh Goods received by every Steamer General Agent for Hawaiian Islands: thought that makes it the most companionable game in the world. But some women believe there is no companionship without conversation. The golf coach knows this to his sorrow. There was a coach who had one woman frequently in charge who was one or the conversationable kind. She could play, and play well, but she was a highstrung, nervous, excitable woman who could not play without a coach because she needed to be constantly kept down. She was playing a match one day in which she was much interested. So was the coach. It was practically his game, and he wanted to win it. The play had been going on for some time and so had madam's tongue. The coach was patient. Finally madam made an execrable stroke; it was absurd, there was no reason for it; she bewailed it long and londly. The UVI coach did not say anything for a moment, but he thought a great deal. "Madam," he said finally, 'if you will only hold your tongue you can play, but if you won't we may as well give up the game first as last." The language was more forcible than elegant, but there had been great cause. Madam looked at her coach, but she did not say a word. She hardly said another
